

Make a Green Switch, Save the Planet

Global warming and climate change are not problems for the distant future; currently, the entire world and its citizens—old, young, rural, urban—are experiencing its effects.

Venerable Master Hsing Yun said, “We should not be overly frightened or consider climate change as an alarmist talk, so much that we turn a deaf ear to it. Because of the unending plundering of the earth in recent years that trigger continuous natural disasters, we should be alert that the earth is ill. The earth can be sick is just like the body can be sick. When a person is sick, one needs medical treatment and rescue; when the earth is sick, it also relies on all of us for rescue.”

Since the cause is clear, why don't we make every effort to avoid negative consequences by changing our actions? Buddha's Light International Association (BLIA) proposes Vege Plan A—a top priority that supersedes any religion, belief, or health reason.

Vege Plan A is action-oriented.

What you eat and how you eat, determines the future of the world.
